

Nanophase receives HIGH PRAISE

NanoUltra is an invaluable tool for any window cleaning company that is seeking to grow or to offer any sort of glass restoration services.

back where you started, watching the mineral deposits build up again.

To resolve this problem, NanoUltra Stain Remover and Polish removes the mineral stains from the glass; and in cases of severe corrosion, there can be significant improvement. The NanoUltra products are much gentler and more environmentally friendly than the typical stain removers.

Customers are particularly pleased when window cleaners are able to solve a problem. One of Columbus Window Cleaning's customers had a building that was so severely stained it was proving difficult to rent. They used this building as their first large scale test of the product, providing the customer with the full treatment: remove, restore, and protect. The building was completely transformed, and the customer is now considering them for another one of their facilities.

Facilities with windows that were restored to like-new condition using the NanoUltra Stain Remover and Polish, and then treated with the NanoUltra Treatment, are proving highly resistant to further mineral staining. This is a crucial factor in the profitability of the professional window cleaner. Property managers and building owners are quick to realize that stain-free glass improves the appearance of their building, making it easier to rent space or sell, and generally increasing the value of the property.

Time is money, and the time we save not scrubbing away at heavily-stained windows is time we can spend on other jobs, expanding our business. NanoUltra is an invaluable tool for any window cleaning company that is seeking to grow or to offer any sort of glass restoration services. For more information contact visit www.nano-ultra.com

When Columbus Window Cleaning was approached by Nanophase Technologies to serve as tester for their new NanoUltra™ Stain Remover and Polish, and Treatment, they jumped at the chance. For the past ten years they watched their window cleaners systematically treat customer's heavily stained windows using virtually every glass restoration product on the market – and various combinations of them – with varying degrees of success.

Window cleaners can relate to this problem. You can scrub some windows, but the stains never quite come off, leaving you with frustrated employees and unhappy customers. Then it rains the next day, and you're right